

ONE HOUSEHOLD. ONE LPG CONNECTION.

Surrender your multiple LPG Connections and be on the right side of the law.

- The Government of India has recently amended the Gas Control Order under which only one LPG connection (along with DBC) is permitted in any household consisting of husband, wife, married children and dependant parents living in a dwelling unit having a common kitchen. Thus, multiple LPG connections in a household are now totally forbidden.
- Holding multiple LPG connections also block the release of new connections to other needy families, who otherwise resort to using non eco-friendly fuels, thus harming the environment.
- Therefore, customers having more than one LPG connection in their homes are hereby advised to surrender multiple connections, if any, immediately. If you are left with only a single-cylinder connection after surrendering the other connection(s), an option will be available to you for converting the same into DBC (Double Bottle Connection).
- Further to streamline LPG supplies, the amended Gas Control Order now requires customers with Piped Natural Gas (PNG) connections or reticulated LPG connections to surrender their LPG connections immediately. And wherever PNG connections already exist, as per amended Gas Control Order, Oil Companies have been forbidden from issuing new LPG connections and also to stop LPG supplies to the existing connections, pending surrender of the same.

- Possessing multiple LPG connections is in gross violation of the Gas Control Order and would attract complete stoppage of LPG supplies. Supplies would be resumed only after multiple connections have been surrendered. The Oil Companies between them have shared consumer data to detect multiple connections and stop supplies to such customers forthwith, till the multiple connections are surrendered.

- Kindly therefore, make sure that at any point in time, not more than one LPG connection (with DBC) is in use in your household. This is the best way to ensure that your kitchen is safe and secure, and that you remain on the right side of the law.

Issued in public interest by:

For suggestions, complaints, queries or feedback pertaining to Petrol, Diesel or LPG services, feel free to call toll free numbers 155233 or 1800-2333-555 or contact the field officer (whose contact details are displayed at the petrol stations/LPG distributorships)